BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

Woollen, Molzan and Partners were one of the foremost modernist architectural firms of Indianapolis. The firm's founder, Evans Woollen III, was born in Indianapolis in 1927, and had ancestral ties to the city going back to the 1840s. Woollen studied architecture at Yale University, working under famed "Glass House" architect Philip Johnson. In 1955, he returned to Indianapolis to establish his own firm, practicing the architectural style of Modernism and also exploring Brutalism in the 1960s and 1970s. The firm changed from Woollen Associates to Woollen, Molzan and Partners in 1982. They dissolved in 2011. Woollen passed away in May of 2016.

Woollen's earliest works consisted of mid-century modern residences and commercial remodels, but after establishing himself, Woollen explored Brutalism with both apartment and office building projects, including critically-acclaimed Indianapolis works like the John J. Barton Towers, Butler University's Clowes Memorial Hall, and the Federal Office Building, also known as the Minton-Capehart Building. The cold, unornamented architectural style has become one of the most controversial, but remains highly regarded for its significance in architectural history.

While embracing new styles, Woollen also successfully completed several historic preservation-related projects. It is often said that mid-century architects had an "out with the old, in with the new" attitude regarding older buildings, but this was simply not the case for Woollen, as his firm managed the historic rehabilitation of numerous Indianapolis apartment buildings, churches, commercial buildings, and theatres, such as the St. Meinrad Archabbey Monastery (St. Meinrad, IN), the Indiana Repertory Theatre, the Majestic Building, and Union Station (all Indianapolis). The sheer volume of photographic documentation exhibited in this collection illustrates Woollen's appreciation for all styles of architecture, as he mourned over the demise of many downtown Victorian buildings that were lost to neglect or redevelopment. His career concluded with several contemporary churches, museums and libraries, both academic and public, including the Christ Church Cathedral addition, the Children's Museum of Indianapolis, White River Gardens, and the Indianapolis Public Library addition (all Indianapolis). His contemporary work playfully experimented with massing and referenced geometry in terms of the form, facades, and fenestration.

Many unique items in this collection provide insight into the mind of Evans Woollen and his design process, including: photo documentation of tenant life inside of Barton Towers, the first large apartment tower for low-income elderly Indianapolis residents; photo documentation and master plan materials depicting the process of community engagement and the use of focus groups for architectural planning; slides taken in the late 1950s and early 1960s highlighting historic Victorian-era downtown buildings prior to demolition, including Tomlinson Hall after it caught on fire but before it was demolished; slide sets Woollen used in lectures documenting not only his work but also covering contemporary works from trips to European cities; and materials for both preservation work and new construction projects for the historic New Harmony Inn and Conference Center in New Harmony, IN.

Maps visualizing the 160 projects in the collection are available upon request.
